Yang

Each day when I put on my necklace and take a look at myself in the mirror, all I see is Yang, the white half of the YinYang symbol. It is a friendship necklace and my best friend has the other dark half and I can't help but think each day how I should be the one with the darker half. As I began this little project though, I began to notice a few things about the necklace especially the pendant. I noticed the little magnet on the side. I used to think it only glued it had special glue that only let it stick to its other half, but it apparently glues to any metal like all magnets do. Though it was a nice revelation, I was slightly disappointed because I liked the fantasy of it only sticking to its other half. Also, I noticed that the pendant slightly resembles a bright crescent moon which made me further wish it was the darker half I owned because the moon itself symbolizes the dark side of mother nature.
